IV. Not only was godliness manifest in the flesh, but was justified in the Spirit.

They buried Christ and declared, "There is an end to that sort of thing that this Man calls godliness." True enought he was put to death and buried, but he was made alive again in the Spirit. The Spirit of the living risen Lord was poured out on the day of Pentacost, not only vindicating the life of our Savior, but demonstrating to all time that the self-same godliness which was incarnate in Christ Jesus will render the whole world godlike when the world jubmits to it in practical obedience.

Whenever the church has tried to manifest godliness in the world, when there has been a putting away of evils and wrong doings of various kinds, the world has derided, "Precisionists, Puritans, people of strict manners and little sense." But over and over again has the Spirit been poured out to justify such demonstration of godliness. And thus, inch by inch, as it were, the world has had its standards of right living raised.
